ABOUT JAMIA HAMDARD & The D/o HPM

The foundation of Jamia Hamdard dates back to 1906, when Hakeem Hafiz Abdul Majeed, a renowned and eminent practitioner of the Unani System of Medicine, established a small Unani clinic. During a period when traditional medical systems encountered significant challenges, he envisioned elevating Unani medicine by adopting a more organized and scientific approach. His objective was to enhance the efficacy of Unani treatments and ensure their systematic, evidence-based delivery to patients. He named this endeavor "Hamdard," a term symbolizing compassion, empathy, and shared human suffering, reflecting his profound dedication to social welfare.

This visionary legacy was carried forward by his distinguished son, Hakeem Abdul Hameed, who played a crucial role in shaping Hamdard's ideals in post-independence India. Even amidst the social and political turbulence of the 1947 partition, Hakeem Abdul Hameed remained committed to his dream of establishing a comprehensive center for education and research. He sought to promote higher learning while emphasizing the rich contributions of Islam and Islamic culture to Indian civilization. Alongside this, he aimed to strengthen research and development in Unani medicine by integrating traditional wisdom with modern scientific methods to address contemporary health challenges.

Over time, Jamia Hamdard grew into a prominent institution of higher education, offering a wide range of academic programs across multiple disciplines. A major milestone in this journey was the introduction of a specialized MBA program in Healthcare and Pharmaceutical Management in 2005 under the Department of Management. Recognizing the growing significance of the healthcare sector and its vital role in building a healthier nation, the university subsequently established a dedicated Department of Healthcare and Pharmaceutical Management.

Since its establishment, the Department of Healthcare and Pharmaceutical Management (D/o HPM) has emerged as one of the university's flagship departments, actively contributing to advanced research and academic excellence in the healthcare and pharmaceutical domains. The department places strong emphasis on enhancing students' managerial competencies, broadening their professional outlook, and fostering holistic personality development.

Backed by a team of highly qualified and experienced faculty members, the department has earned widespread recognition among industry experts, academicians, and scholars. Today, Jamia Hamdard is regarded as a preferred institution for students seeking higher education in healthcare and pharmaceutical disciplines. Nearly two decades since its inception, the department has built a strong alumni network, with graduates holding key managerial and leadership roles in India and abroad. Situated on a sprawling 100-acre campus in South Delhi, Jamia Hamdard provides a vibrant academic environment and attracts students from across the country and abroad. The department also regularly organizes lectures, seminars, and conferences with leading professionals from the healthcare and pharmaceutical sectors, encouraging meaningful engagement with emerging trends and critical issues in the industry.
